"Flower of Scotland" by The Corries

"Flower of Scotland" is a Scottish song, frequently performed at special occasions and sporting events as the unofficial national anthem of Scotland. The song was composed in the mid-1960s by Roy Williamson of the folk group the Corries. The words refer to the victory of the Scots, led by Robert the Bruce, over Edward II of England at the Battle of Bannockburn in 1314.

lyrics: (sich wiederholende Zeilen wurden entfernt)

Oh Flower Of Scotland,
When will we see, your like again
That fought and died for
Yer wee bit hill and glen (yer = your) (wee bit = ein kleines bisschen)
And stood against him
Proud Edward's army
And sent him homeward
Tae think again (tae = to)
The hills are bare now
And autumn leaves lie thick and still
For land that is lost now
Which those so dearly held
And stood against him [...]
Those days are past now
And in the past, they must remain
But we can still rise now
And be the nation again
That stood against him [...]
